

PRODUCE ALERT SAFETY SYSTEM

Henry Avocado Recalls Whole Avocados Because of Possible Health Risk (Listeria)

Reason: potential to be contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes.

Pack/Codes: conventional products purchased at retail, consumers can identify the recalled products by the “Bravocado” stickers. Henry Avocado organic products do not carry the “Bravocado” label on the sticker. Instead those products are labeled “organic” and include “California” on the sticker. Retailers can identify Henry Avocado organic products

Distribution: [Multi-State]: The recalled products – California-grown conventional and organic avocados – were packed at Henry Avocado’s packing facility in California and distributed in Arizona, California, Florida, New Hampshire, North Carolina and Wisconsin. All shipments from the packing facility are subject to the recall (Henry Avocado did not begin packing there until late January 2019).

Illnesses: None

Avocados imported from Mexico and distributed by Henry Avocado are not subject to the recall and may continue to be sold and consumed.

Keeping You Informed,
Your Dedicated NPC Staff